

Abstract

Subject matter: Translation from English into Russian of Theresa May's speeches: translation comment.

Author: Zhabrailova D. S.

Scientific supervisor: Kazakova S. L.

Information about the sponsor organization: Pyatigorsk State University; 9 Kalinina st., Pyatigorsk, Stavropol Krai.

Research relevance: the translation of political articles presents the main difficulty for translation and the necessity to study possible solutions in its translation.

Purpose: to identify the ways and specifics of the translation of terms of a political nature, as well as the execution of a translation analysis of the text itself.

Tasks: identify features and problems posed when translating political articles; determine the role of the term in building a political text; consider the factors affecting the translation of terms; identify the nature of the problem of understanding and interpreting terms; conduct stylistical analysis of political articles in English; identify the main characteristics.

Theoretical and practical significance: is that its results give an idea of the features and difficulties of translating political articles and the concept of this study can be used as a material for lectures and seminars on this topic, when writing essays and coursework, as well as in professional translation activities.

Results of the research: is the analysis of political articles "The speech of Theresa May" in English and its translation into Russian.