

Abstract

Graduation Level of Proficiency Paper
(Bachelor's degree)

Author: Kostukova Mariya Alexandrovna

Research Supervisor: Candidate of philological sciences, Assistant Professor of Russian philology Getmanskaya Marina Yurevna.

Information about the organization-customer: Pyatigorsk state linguistic university.

Topical Importance: it explains by the statement of problems of interlinguistical transformations, occurring generally and particularly.

Tasks: the elicitation of lexical and grammatical transformation, appearing in the translation process, identifying of the order of their inculcation into translation processes.

Goals:

- giving the definition and general characteristic to the transformations;
- marking types of transformations;
- choosing the detailed classification of them ;
- to identify the nature of appearing lexical and grammatical transformations ;
- to collect the most interesting examples, which are drawing the transformations.

Theoretical value and practical applicability: Theoretical significance lies in the analysis of transformation phenomena occurring at the lexical and grammatical levels when translating from English to Russian. It helps us having a fresh view on the formation of aforementioned languages and comparing them. The practical significance is determined by the possibility of using this material in practice of Translation and also in the teaching activities, because materials of our work graphically demonstrates similarities and differences between languages, which promotes fast mastering of the foreign language.